

Mr Puttle meets ELVIS!

Shown above is the shocked expression of Mr Puttle as he literally bumped into ELVIS! at the Allentown Art Museum's Special Showing of the Memphis Blues: Photographs by Ernest C. Withers this past Thursday eve. As Elvis rumors swirled about the galleries that eve, Mr Puttle tried to find a moment of respite from all the activities in the Frank Lloyd Wright room. While admiring the incredible craftsmanship within the area, Mr Puttle bumped into another patron, only to discover he's ELVIS! Fortunately a roving tattooed photographer captured what is believed to be the only known image of this elusive great. After discussing the finer points of music and putting stroke theory with The King, ELVIS! was gracious enough not only to sign this rare Polaroid moment but to exchange email addresses as well. Mr Puttle is now devoting all his spare change to helping future guitar greats.
